Chapter 1 by Molly G

Neptune took a deep breath as nerves coursed through her body. She glanced out at the ocean. It was a deep turquoise colour today, the waves rolling over, creating a beautiful display of the power of the sea, mingled with its majesty and grace. She loved the ocean. It was full of mysteries, and should never be underestimated. Like her.

"AAAND NOW BE PREPARED TO BE BLOWN AWAY BYYYY...NEPTUNE MARINA!" The loudspeaker bellowed her name and cheering started. Hefting the surf board under her arm, she ran toward the surf, sand scratching her feet, wind in her hair. She felt the cool water lap at her feet and instantly felt the nerves and nausea die down. She felt calm and in control, ready to face anything. It was always like this. It could be described as a link. Her thoughts wandered back to when she was a kid...

She was sitting on a jetty with her mum, dipping her feet in the water. They were laughing, just enjoying each others company in the serenity of the moment with the ocean. It gave them a sense of security. But that had been when her mum was alive...

She jolted back to the present and set about paddling toward the wave. But a split second before she hit the wave, she realised something was wrong. Too late. She was swept under the surface feeling terrified in the sea for the first time in her life. The next thing she knew was that she was slowly slipping into dark...
